S'WILMA BRINGS HOME CENTEX TITLE

AUSTIN - The ladies of S'wilma traveled to Austin, TX this weekend and returned as champions of the tenth annual CENTEX tournament. Their 1st place trophy, Phred the Dead, characterized their utter devastation of the opposition. Their dominance over the competition is evidenced by their allowing only 13 points all weekend while building a record of 6 wins and 0 losses. S'wilma only needed 10 women to assert their dominance: Tana, Susan, Krista, Sarah, and Tina comprised the Tempe contingent, with Diva and Susan from Tucson, Lori from El Paso (good place to be from), Mia from Santa Fe, and Kristi from (where is Kristi actually from?) rounding out the semi-regional squad. After the dust had cleared and the bodies were counted, Tana had garnered Player Of the Tournament honors.

S'wilma was able to capitalize on a relentless zone defense and a great attitude. They were able to convert numerous upwind points, including the championship point. Of their effort, Sarah said, "We ALL play together." But looking ahead to San Diego she said, "We really need a killer instinct." Right - and the Pope needs a date.

In the afterglow of the tournament, some of the S'wilma women were heard to say that not only is S'wilma good, S'wilma is good-looking. Which prompted an unnamed source to recall Susan yelling, "Hit me, I'm open, my hair is perfect!" Of course, this was before a hit and run was perpetrated upon Susan's beauty kit (by Susan), reducing her hair dryer to just a bunch of electronic spaghetti with a smashed plastic-casing garnish. The hairdryer devastation incident was S'wilma's only setback of the tourney. Susan commented, "I don't have a drinking problem."

So congratulations to S'wilma! Good luck in San Diego. We hope to see Elin, Angie, Lisa, Mary Lou, and Vicki join the fray in Mission Bay.

GREEN MACHINE GETS SLIMED IN TEXAS

AUSTIN - Discgust of Arizona sent a team to the tenth annual CENTEX in Austin this weekend and made a respectable but somewhat disappointing showing. After a spirited 1st game win over Dallas, Discgust's level of play took a decided down turn, and the team finished with a 2 - 2 record for the weekend.

Discgust began pool play against a testy Dallas team. The conditions were marked by a stiff wind which persisted throughout the tournament, but the character of the game was colored by numerous nasty arguments (most initiated by Dallas, who didn't seem to fully understand the rules). But in the end the effort and karma of Discgust prevailed. The most memorable play of the game was the upwind winner tossed by Matt and caught by Birdie Man. It was hailed as irrefutable evidence of Einstein's theories regarding time warpage. Unfortunately, Discgust was unable to pose a serious threat to any other contending team. D-Hey summed it up saying, "We lost our buzz." Brian intoned, "It doesn't matter how you play, winning is better than losing. Lets get 'em in San Diego!"
